

There are two issues that seem to be in the public eye.

The first issue is a technological one, concerning the impact to safety and spectrum of airborne users of cellular phones.

The second issue is one of social behavior, concerning the impact on the comfort of surrounding passengers.

The first is the Commission's venue. The second is not.

I urge you to allow the air carriers to experiment and discover the best ways to satisfy the competing needs of its passengers.